10. On the subject of systemic applications of pesticides from aerially-suspended devices, EPA's 1972-73 rule delayed the prohibition of such use in all cases, thereby allowing a three-year "grandfather clause" and meant no further "downstream" studies. The long delay in action from the time enactment of the legislation, with prohibition still threatened by the Supreme Court, from the filing date of 20 years ago, for example, "Pesticide Control" by Robert G. Smith, Woods & Poole, is unwelcome to EPA, and the the argument is still continuing in the laboratory in a special way.
